As an international journal that finds fulfilment in providing quality reading materials for our readers, we are delighted to publish the Volume 11, Number 2 issue of our highly respected journal “Global Journal of Guidance and Counseling: Current Perspectives”. The aim of this issue is to present the findings of research that was conducted by our seasoned researchers in the areas of cyber counselling, family counselling and Gender counselling.

With most of our countries opening up after the global slow-down due to the pandemic, we deem it necessary to address the selected topics in this issue. We believe the topics will address individual’s concerns across the globe and help individuals to be better prepared for life after COVID. This issue which covers topics from four different continents of the world is rich in information and would guide our readers as well as researchers in the field of guidance and counselling.

Enjoy reading!!
